I applaud what you are doing, and I agree with your perspective on African children...It is probably going to be hard to change such enconced mentalities – just like in my home country of India, it's very hard to change belief patterns because they are embedded in culture and also in religion. BUT – someone has to try. Someone will make progress. It is time. And at the very least, those after us can build on our current work to finally achieve a breakthrough. So, our efforts are never wasted – not even a bit. #EMEACHildSafetySummit2017. Sameer Hinduja, Ph.D. Co-Director, Cyberbullying Research Center, Professor of Criminology and Criminal Justice, Florida Atlantic University
